Winter 2020

The Call of the Wild

Into the Wild

It was four years ago when we lost my Dad to heart disease. He was raised on a family farm in Hastings, Minnesota, a quaint river town nestled on the bank of Mississippi River. Today, our family celebrates countless traditions that stem from a rural way of life including hunting, fishing, and most importantly a deep connection to the land and water.

Dad had a unique way of fixing broken things. Often with the swift crack of a hammer, bailing wire or shoe goo, there was rarely an occasion where he wasn't working to improve and make something better. We were taught to "add just a little more pepper, fly straight and steer into the waves." Always take life head on.

The new year at WF brings optimism as our staff advances the Clean Drain Dry Initiative that works to prevent the spread of invasive species. The State-Fish Art program teaches youth around the world about fish, fishing and clean water. Our newest program, Prairie City USA® has tremendous promise to help pollinators, like the monarch butterfly and rusty patch bumble bee, recover with more habitat. Making prairie common again will provide countless benefits to wildlife and communities across America. Funding development of this program is a top priority.

2020 is Wildlife Forever's year of the caribou.

Performing one of the greatest migrations on earth, caribou travel thousands of miles over snow packed mountains and windswept tundra. A lead bull usually guides the herd along this journey to safer and warmer wintering grounds. Caribou are resilient and a wonderful symbol of what is truly wild.

Together, with your financial support, WF will continue to fix key conservation challenges and find solutions that conserve our outdoor heritage. We'll fight to ensure strict guidelines maintain our 94.3% efficiency rating that you can be proud of. I'm grateful for members and donors who help to make Wildlife Forever possible.

Join us, head on, into the wild.

The Headquarters planting is moving onto phase two. Planting in winter may sound odd but many native seeds need to be outside to properly germinate in the springtime.

Minnesota Native Landscapes donated their native Mesic Prairie Seed Mix which will be sprinkled on top of the snow on our micro-prairie. As the sun shines on the darkly-colored seeds, they will warm and melt their way down to the soil keeping them safely under the snow until springtime.

On The Ground Work

570 acres of prairie restoration are planned and are already underway for 2020. Restoration work will entail removing invasive vegetation and encroaching trees from the open grasslands that support an abundance of pollinator and wildlife species. A species of concern in our focus this year is the endangered rusty patched bumble bee.
