

Florida on the Atlantic coast. We reached tomorrow and lay back on the water and drove it across the ocean. We were away from shore and started fishing for fish but the problem was that there was so much muck, floating on top of the ocean.

As time later I had a little pull on my rod. I thought I was just trash passing by but... I got a bite. My line went t up but, it was too heavy and I was pulling my bait down. I realized that this is going to be an actual fish. That's great huh? I cast out hook, meeting the fish. My dad ran to me and helped me realize the fish. "I can see a long one!" I said looking out while coming up. I also saw a piece of the body of the fish. I recognized it and realized, "It's a sailfin!" cried my dad.

We got the sailfin into the boat and measured its length, width, etc. I also realized that the sailfin didn't move that much. My dad flipped it on the other side and we saw a huge thing coming out of its body. I was also worried about it because it looks very weak and hurt from that thing. "Go get my gloves. We can't touch the fish, we're releasing it back," said my dad. I grabbed the gloves that were on the boat and gave them to him. He wore it and used to the sailfin, "Good work." He stuck his hand into its mouth, feeling the thing that was poking out of the side of its body. "The worst about it, even though he can still swim, I am still worried about it," I said to everyone. "He or she will probably be fine," said, my mom. "Probably," said my sister agreeing with her.

"Yep it" cried my dad, carefully putting it out. I saw something gray and slippery coming out of its body. It was already swimming and we still wanted to save this sailfin. As I saw it come out, the fish was a piece of a fish. "Yes, this is a female sailfin, what should we name it?" He helped it swim fast and I was thinking of a name for it. "We should name it Sally. Sally the Sailfin," I said. Everybody agreed since it was a female and even if her or we could probably. Sally swam alongside the surface and it said goodbye to us by jumping out of the water with the
