

no those disgusting "fishing fish traps" I used to use, what do you like to eat? I bet you eat some food that I don't hope your house is safe from predators and you don't get eaten! Write back soon!

Dear Mrs. Fox, (Share the Great Owlfish)

Hi, did you know that one of the kids in the class researched what owlfish eat? He said the teacher said when she saw the (short) list of food (insects, shrimp, and algae), she said "Owlfish only eat 1 mouthful (food) and when I want to spend my time on that?" It's sad that she didn't agree to any of the food on the list.

Dear Charles the Owlfish,

I was in the ocean (getting excited) Two weeks ago, the collector who was caught! I was kind of very over-rear searching for food in the reef (and) next to the volcano! The collector is getting a little more polluted and those scientists keep wasting me with cameras! I like to swim alone, but I hope the new water fish is about 10 inches long and like to eat algae, brittle stars, sea urchins and corals. My favorite is brittle stars. GO GO GO! What is your favorite food? I hope the kids feed you better things! I'm sorry that the teacher didn't agree to anything on the list. I'll let you in on a secret! I keep on hearing other fish whisper about (me) I think it's about how I swim in a single manner. I can swim forward, backward and down over things! My reef is pretty safe from predators, but many of the triggerfish that live here are getting caught in the shallow water tanks when they search for food. There is a variety of coral of corals, sharks and groupers, and sometimes even tuna and warms. Golly, humans are not triggerfish. I think it's a waste of time - can live to be 22 years old, so we can write to each other for a while! How old are you? Write back!

Ernest
