

Intelligent birds species. These birds live up to their French name, composed, "without sound." We find many more clues to being this elegant and lovely. Male painted buntings have a beautiful blue, green, yellow, and red color scheme, while female birds have yellowish-green feathers. Although female painted buntings have less vibrant colors, they still happen to be one of the smartest birds in the world. Thanks for not only their intelligence and beauty, painted buntings will remind you to talk from your heart and add color to your life. In a way that words cannot express, I almost feel a strong connection to these birds I have never met before. Just like that, I share painted buntings to star in my artwork.

Painted buntings may express happiness and color, but there are many sad things happening to these birds. Painted buntings are being captured and sold at an expensive price, with buyers paying up to $25,000. These birds are now threatened, and could possibly be extinct. Many of these birds are being trapped just for entertainment or to be pets. All birds should be kept safe, including beautiful and vibrant birds like painted buntings. There is a rapid loss of habitat as they live in semi-open areas with shrubs and/or trees. It is hard to find a perfect place that fits the needs of the painted bunting, and places that painted buntings will live are being destroyed. That is why we need to help these intelligent birds, to give them the happiness they need.

To help these bird species, food and a nice open area is needed. Painted buntings live areas that have shrubs and trees native to the southern part of North America, considering these birds mainly live in southern North America. These birds will migrate and live in different areas, staying in a few different spots when they are not migrating or breeding. Painted buntings will love water sources that almost resemble a bathtub and they would love moving water since it is more attractive to them. Seeds and insects will serve as a food source for these lovely birds. From the special ones, mulberry, mangoes, etc, things oranges, guavas, oak, maple, and pine, is what a painted bunting would love to
